Board of Occupational Safety and Health welcomes two new members

James Downie, representing State employees and Roy Woods, representing municipal employees, were recently appointed to standard four-year terms on the Board of Occupational Safety and Health.

Contract workers are public sector employees

As a result of a formal appeal, the Board of Occupational Safety and Health determined that contract workers who work for public sector employers are considered public sector employees. They therefore fall under the jurisdiction of the Maine Department of Labor for safety and health enforcement.

Compliance directives are on the web

New Compliance Directives describe how the Bureau of Labor Standards will enforce the occupational safety and health standards in public sector workplaces. Directives #3-02 Chainsaw Personal Protective Equipment and #4-02 Electrical Wiring-Protection from Mechanical Damage are on the internet at <http://www.state.me.us/labor/bls/compliancedirectives/index.html>.

Free SafetyWorks! classes start in September
